SUMMARY

The Regional Research Promotion Programme (RRPP) Western Balkans is organizing a fully-funded comprehensive training on social science research methods tailored for junior researchers in the Western Balkans. The course lasts 8 days, and will be held from the 11th to the 18th April 2016 in Sarajevo, Bosnia and Herzegovina.

According to relevant studies, research capacity in the social sciences in the Western Balkans is underdeveloped. Students and young researchers have low levels of skills and knowledge in research methods, especially when it comes to research design, research techniques, data analysis, and academic writing. There are several reasons for this. First, training in research methods, writing, and analytical skills at university level is often inadequate. Second, there is a lack of opportunities for practicing research methods during one's studies. Third, there is also a lack of relevant extra-curricular training programs in the field. The consequences of this situation have a negative effect on the academic careers of young researchers, the quality of research, and the job prospects for students.

The Research Academy constitutes an educational program that addresses the most relevant aspects of social science research methods and enables young researchers to improve their methodological, analytical, and writing skills. It is designed for junior researchers who are currently working on a research project in the field of social sciences at public or private research centers (higher education institutions, research institutes, think tanks), who have earned their master's degree in the field of social sciences at a university in the countries of the Western Balkans (Albania, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Kosovo, Macedonia, Montenegro, and Serbia), and who live and work in the region.

The Research Academy is designed as a summer school composed of several linked one-day modules. During the program of the Research Academy junior researchers will be guided through all stages of the research process and the sessions will be highly interactive and practice-oriented.

The program will be delivered by a team of 13 trainers who come from a number of European and regional universities and research institutes, with extensive experience in the field of research methods and academic writing.

Additional information on the application procedure, training modules and the trainers is provided below:

APPLICATION PROCEDURE

Who can apply?

Up to 35 participants will be enrolled in the Research Academy, based on the following selection criteria:

- Junior researcher (MA/MSc graduates and/or early PhD students) with a maximum of 3 years experience in the field of social science research;
- Currently affiliated with a research institute/center, think tank, or university;
- Currently working on a research project as a researcher (research assistant, junior researcher, researcher, or similar);
- Have at least one published research paper;
- Good command of English.

The best applicants will be selected by a team of 4 international and regional experts.

How to apply?

Interested candidates should submit the following documents in English:

1. Application form;
2. CV (full Curriculum Vitae)
3. Example of a research paper (research study, policy report, policy brief, policy memo, working paper, discussion paper, article in research journal, book chapter, or MA/MSc thesis);
4. Description of the project (one page) that the candidate is currently working on, along with a description of his/her role in the project;
5. Recommendation letter from a supervisor - The letter should support the applicant's participation in the Research Academy, emphasizing the relevance of the training program for the applicant's career prospects.

Application Deadline

Applications and inquiries entitled "Research Academy" should be sent to both of the following email addresses: lcubih@rrpp-westernbalkans.net and rrpp@unifr.ch, no later than 15th January 2016.

You will receive a confirmation of receipt within two days following the submission of the application. Should you not receive a confirmation email, please contact us immediately.

Late and incomplete applications will not be considered.

The final decision regarding the selected candidates will be made on 9th February 2016 and promptly communicated to all applicants.

Please note that the organizers will cover the expenses of the training, including travel and accommodation costs.

In 2015 he was visiting Researcher at the University of Lausanne.

Gazela Pudar

Gazela Pudar Draško (1982) works as a junior researcher at the Institute for Philosophy and Social Theory in Belgrade. Fields of interest are in sociology, such as nationalism, intellectuals, social inclusion and environmental issues. She also deals with youth and policy research. Her doctoral thesis, at the Faculty of Philosophy in Belgrade, was titled "Attitudes of socially - politically influential intellectuals on the national in Serbia after 2000". She is active in the civil society sector, and has been engaged as a consultant/researcher on numerous projects with the Council of Europe, UNHCR, UNDP, NGOs SeConS and Evropski Omladinski Centar.

Bojana Radovanović

Bojana Radovanović is a PhD candidate at the Centre of Development Studies, University of Cambridge. She graduated from the Faculty of Economics, University of Belgrade. She completed her master studies in Ethics at the Faculty of Philosophy, University of Belgrade and in Development Studies at the University of Cambridge. Currently, she is working on her PhD thesis titled: Individual Giving: Theoretical Discussions and the Evidence from Serbia and Canada. Bojana is an assistant researcher at the Institute for Philosophy and Social Theory and a local coordinator of the Regional Research Promotion Programme in the Field of Social Sciences in the Western Balkans (RRPP). She has published a number of academic papers on ethics, decision theory and development studies. She has also published and edited a number of studies dealing with the social science research sector in Serbia.

Dr. Michael J. Roy

Michael Roy is Senior Lecturer (Associate Professor) in Social Business at the Glasgow School for Business and Society and the Yunus Centre for Social Business and Health at Glasgow Caledonian University (GCU), UK. An economic sociologist and public policy specialist, Michael's research interests are interdisciplinary in nature, across political economy, economic sociology and public health, and he is especially interested in how community-led 'bottom up' action can work to address aspects of social vulnerability, which in turn impact upon the social determinants of health and health inequalities. He has particular expertise in qualitative methods inspired by the critical realist philosophical framework and undertook one of the very first Systematic Reviews in the field, the results of which were published in Social Science and Medicine. His work has helped to open up a new scientific field of inquiry on the interface between social enterprise and health and well-being, and he has published extensively in this area. Michael serves as Programme Leader for the university's flagship Masters in Science (MSc) programme in Social Business and Microfinance, which was launched in 2014, and is currently involved in a number of high profile research projects. He is presently co-investigator on a project called EFESIIS (Enabling the Flourishing and Evolution of Social Entrepreneurship for Innovative and Inclusive Societies), funded by the European Commission's 7th Framework Programme, and is co-investigator in another major European project, a Horizon 2020 funded project called TransSol, led by the University of Siegen, Germany, to investigate transnational solidarity, civil society and precarity across Europe since the financial crisis. Michael is also involved in mentoring a group of researchers involved in social enterprise research in the Western Balkans, funded by the RRPP. Michael has considerable experience in developing and analyzing public policy, having worked in various policy areas including science, innovation, learning and skills, regional economic development and public finance in over a decade with central government in Scotland. He has also served on the board of directors of a number of organizations, including his local Chamber of Commerce, where he was elected Vice President, and set up and ran his own social enterprise for a time.

Dr. Lea Sgier

Lea Sgier is an assistant professor in political science at Central European University (CEU) in Budapest, and a lecturer at the University of Geneva and at the Professional University of Social Work in Geneva (Switzerland). She is also an instructor at the Essex Summer School in Social Science Data Analysis and Collection (UK), the ECPR Winter School in Methods and Techniques (Germany) and the Concordia Workshops in Social Science Research Methods in Montreal (Canada). Her main fields of interest are discourse analysis and interpretive methods, women/gender in politics and old age (Alzheimer policy and older people's citizenship in particular).

Dr. Stephen Sinclair

Stephen Sinclair is currently Reader in Social Policy in the Glasgow School for Business and Society at Glasgow Caledonian University and a member of GCU's Yunus Centre for Social Business and Health. He joined GCU in February 2006, initially as a Research Fellow in the Scottish Poverty Information Unit. He was previously a Principal Research Officer in the Scottish Government, and before joining the civil service, a Research Associate at the Centre for Research into Socially Inclusive Services at Heriot-Watt University, and a Senior Lecturer in Social Policy at Anglia Ruskin University in Cambridge. He studied for his PhD at the University of Kent (1999), having completed an M.Phil. at the University of Oxford (1991). His undergraduate studies were taken at the University of Strathclyde (1989). Stephen Sinclair's principal research interests include poverty, deprivation and social exclusion. He has also undertaken research on various aspects of financial exclusion, social innovation, public administration and public service reform. He has published five articles, two book chapters and a research report in the last 2 years, and delivered presentations at eight academic conferences and policy events. He also has two books scheduled for publication in 2016 and 2017. He has undertaken research commissioned by the UK and Scottish Governments, Joseph Rowntree Foundation, Nuffield Foundation and European Commission, among other funders, and reviews grant applications for the UK Economic and Social Research Council as well as articles for 11 different international journals. He is a Senior Fellow of the UK Higher Education Academy.
